WWI was not supposed to be fought in America. The two nations were at war over a ship, the SS Leonine. The Leonine was going from New York to Canada. A bunch of Canadians and Americans were onboard the ship. When the ship was torpedoed by the British. The Canadians and Americans were separated from the ship, and ended up in 4 different boats. Fortunately for all, the boat that contained the Americans were able to make it to the shore of Long Island. The Canadian boat had to go ashore at the Canadian consulate's office and wait for the war to end. They were told to wait until Sunday and that they would be picked up on Sunday at noon. The boat that containing the Canadians never made it to the shore. Instead, it drifted out in the Atlantic Ocean, and eventually sank. So, the Canadians were stuck on the shores of Long Island for more than a week. They were stranded from the Americans that were at war, and from England too. The Americans on Long Island were anxious to find their compatriots, and eventually, the war ended. The Canadians were granted the position of temporary Canadian citizens. They were left stranded on the shores of the United States. So, what happened to the Canadians? A
