Autodesk 3ds max 2011 32 bit.HIV-1-positive women on highly active antiretroviral therapy (HAART) can transmit infection to their infant at a higher rate than HIV-1-negative women, raising concerns about the safety of breastfeeding in the treatment of HIV-1 infection. HIV-1-positive women on HAART who are breastfeeding are at greater risk of transmitting virus to their infants than those receiving HAART not related to pregnancy. A study of 4,849 pregnant and postpartum HIV-1-positive women in the U.S. found that women who were breastfeeding delivered babies with higher levels of HIV-1 DNA in their blood than did HIV-1-negative women, and that this difference in DNA increased by approximately 1% for each week that breastfeeding continued. HIV-1-positive women, who were on HAART during pregnancy and postpartum, were approximately twice as likely to transmit the virus to their infants as were those not on HAART. The findings, published in the Oct. 18 issue of the journal Human Retrovirus, are from the largest prospective study conducted to date of such issues related to breastfeeding.
