I'm sending a long list of actions - This list may vary from 10 to 100. The list is getting stored in a variable. During the list variable is being created, it's length is going to be more than 100. The only way I can think of is splitting the variable into multiple variables so that it doesn't get exceeded the 100 size limit, then combine them all in the action. I was wondering if there is another way around this. A: If you are using Struts 1.3.10 or newer, you can use the @DefineListAction annotation to generate lists that are permitted to be longer than 255 characters. Struts 2 has the same functionality and more. If you are stuck with Struts 1.x, you can use the element in your actions, and you can define a maximum amount of properties per action and how many actions you wish to define. If you're really stuck with Struts 1.x, I would recommend writing your own JsonBundle to store the data. Shark Tank is following its fiscal year up with a bang, with shark couple Kevin O'Leary and Lori Greiner staying pretty much the same as last year. Greiner holds the lead in the competition, with 88 percent awareness. O'Leary, who is represented by a local spokesperson, is second with 88 percent awareness. Last year, O'Leary was first with 63 percent and Greiner third with 58 percent awareness. "This is a great time to buy Greiner's Children and Family Kitchen," said Ray Chambers, an O'Leary partner. "Market research has proved the brand to be a very effective brand that helps people solve their challenges of family meals and snacks."
