New editors can create their own competitions or leagues in real time in a FIFA community. These competitions now use player ratings and attributes based on on-ball actions, and can be created with visual styles ranging from basic to very advanced. The engine also allows for over 350 real-life sports and player classes to be loaded. Enhanced tactical controls aim to improve player positioning, passing options and successful passes at all levels. New training and skills contribute to improved on-ball actions. Skilled players will be able to handle the ball more often, while the skilful head will be able to collect the ball more often. A new player movement system allows for new forms of movement, such as dribbling in short passes, technical dribbling and dekes. The in-game commentary is new and features a match report for all competitive games that can be played in Career Mode. The match report in Career Mode is like that in real life. The game has been developed with EA SPORTS' Player Impact Engine to deliver authentic player behavioural responses in-game. This is the biggest and most ambitious goal EA SPORTS has ever set for FIFA. A footballing first to allow players to feel and react to their on-ball actions in a way that is more intuitive, rewarding and natural than ever before. This is a key part of delivering a FIFA experience that is more fun, immersive, and interactive than ever before. During the Beta program, we asked the FUT community to help test the game. We also played the game in a tournament. We think that we have created a product that has a great level of polish, and we're really excited to get it out there for all of you to test. The Beta will start this weekend. FIFA 18 for the first time included 2K's Player Impact Engine, which allowed players to feel and react to their on-ball actions in a way that was more intuitive, rewarding and natural than ever before. Since the introduction of PIE in FIFA 18, players have found a new level of immersion with new forms of movement, while those who have tried PIE in FIFA have also found it to be a huge step in the right direction. Finally, the biggest change in PIE was its comprehensive training system, which allowed for individual training to be performed at any time to help improve your overall skills and proficiency. This has always been the most important element of skill development, and it has
