The Finn is struggling for grip at the start of the Singapore Grand Prix, and has been forced to pit on a first-lap drive through in order to bring the all-important tools and fuel back to his car. After the race, Red Bull team boss Christian Horner suggested Ferrari's tactics would not work in future. The inclusion of its own logo on Raikkonen's car came after his late first-lap stop in Singapore, according to team boss Maurizio Arrivabene. "This is a bit too much," Arrivabene was quoted as saying by Italy's Gazzetta dello Sport. "In the future we will try to avoid this type of conduct. Ferrari have never do this to the team." A dejected Kimi Raikkonen can be seen at the Ferrari garage after his first-lap stop in the Singapore Grand Prix. But the traffic was at a standstill for one reason or another, which was it's usual for that time of the year. But when my husband and I arrived there was a lot more than usual. I pulled over on to the FDR Drive and recorded as much of it as I could. I counted 340 vehicles. It took nearly 20 minutes to get through the traffic on the Brooklyn Bridge. Join the conversation!
