The Revit Twitter keeps you up to date with the latest news about Revit. You can follow the Revit community on Twitter to stay informed about the news and the development of Revit. In addition, the Revit User Group is a vibrant community that shares tips about Revit usage. It is also a great place to chat and exchange ideas. To find a version of the software that is compatible with your operating system, you can enter your operating system in the download selector. If you don't know your operating system, you can also look it up on Wikipedia. In your agenda, you can track your learning progress, add training notes or take notes. You can add folders to a specific topic or a specific course. You can also manage your activity or changes to your personal profile. This is where you can find all your training information and you can link it to Revit. In addition, you can connect your LinkedIn, XING, Facebook and Google account to Revit and use them to save your notes and training information. Users can also click on the question in the iCAD panel and start a new conversation in iCAD or Revit. I use this program for anything related to Photoshop or Web Design. "Codes" is a great resource for learning to code in Photoshop. Their tutorials are free and from easy to harder. Their articles and blog posts also helpful and informative. You can find tutorials for alot of your Photoshop needs. They also offer great free tools for designers to get their work done faster and cheaper. My favorite is the Tons of Textures for Photoshop. It provides you with 24 professional textures from their own stock and you can easily use them on your projects and in your designs. Other free tools include a free animation service for photos and content creation and a text tool to import text to your designs. Find out more about Codes here: Codes Products
