The victim had been cut deeply across the throat from ear to ear. How? Only God knows. The courts of a civilized country do not pay money simply to corroborate a fraudulent story. That is, with the exception of those who are part of a fraudulent scheme to defraud. But the culture of passivism, or "he-said, she-said," so prevalent in the United States, causes the courts to pay money to support a life-ending claim of injustice. Perhaps the culture has gotten to the point where its leaders do not care about poverty, for a poor person's story is irrelevant when there is no insurance policy to be had. The U.S. government paid for the autopsy and toxicology reports. The autopsy was carried out by Dr. Mohammed Al-Zahrani, then the chief forensic pathologist of Saudi Arabia. Dr. Zahrani's report was that the victim's autopsy showed no signs of injury to the back, neck, shoulders, legs, or stomach, and that there was damage to the skull and neck area. The report did not state where on the body the damage was found, and specifically identified no injury that would have caused death. The toxicology report was analyzed in a U.S. laboratory and found to contain no drugs, poisons, or any other thing that could cause death. And it was not a slip of paper that was mistaken for a prescription, but a hermetic, pill-sized prescription with the name "Diazepam" on it. In an interview with the U.S. Department of Defense published on the website Armed Forces Journal, Dr
